Motion International Launches New Website

Updated site showcases expanded offerings, integrates international sites

MINNEAPOLIS, June 2007 — Motion International, an exclusively Oracle professional services company that works with manufacturing firms with international operations, has released a new website.

The site integrates multiple international websites maintained by Motion and Oraplus/Equilybra, a European firm it acquired in early 2007. And it reflects the company's expanded service offerings since that acquisition. In addition, the site's content and navigation system have been reorganized and upgraded.

Quick links at the bottom of each page allow visitors to quickly find additional content about the relevant topic, reducing the number of clicks necessary to get a deeper view of topics of interest.

Further enhancements, like new contents available for downloading and an Italian version of the website, will be released soon.

"The new website represents a major step forward for the company," said Motion Marketing Manager Silvano Trezzini. "It enhances the integration following our recent acquisition, and it leverages the strengths of all the companies."
